Arrival of the Clipper White Swallow.

Early on Monday morning, the clipper ship White Swallow, Ellery, arrived at this port 16 days from San Francisco, bringing a small mail, but very interesting news confirming the capture of Fort Donelson in Tennessee, and the probable occupation of Savannah by Com. Dapout.

The particulars of the Battle of Fort Donelson, though lengthy, we quote in full from the Bulletin of Feb. 224.

The victory consists in the capture of three promipent Generals, 15,000 (that is the number as confirmed by latest reports) soldiers, the Fort and all its contents, 3,000 horses and equipage, 58 Field pieces, 17 heavy fort guns, 20,000 stand of arms, ammunition, &c., &c., valued at a mi lion of dollars. It is a most glorious victory.

The Battle of Fort Donelson.

[In order to make the narrative that immediately follows the better understood, and complete, we reprint here a portion of a desputch which we published in yesterday's issue .- ED. BULLETIN.]

Cuicago, February 18-1:45 P. M. The fight at Fort Donelson on Saturday was bloody and desperate. The right wing of our forces, com-posed of the first and second brigades of Gen. McClernand's division, bore the brunt of the fight. The enemy commenced the attack by firing some grape into the 31st and 29th Illinois regiments, which were endamped on the extreme right. The first brigade, Col. Oglesby commanding, immediately were drawn up in line in the following order: 18th, extreme right; Sth next, followed by the 29th, which supported the right of Stewart's battery light artillery, with the 21st on the extreme left-all Illinois regiments.

The 21 Division, Col. Wallace commanding, consisted of the 11th, 20th, 45th and 48th Illinois regiments, with McAllister's and Taylor's batteries light artillery, four siege guns. The attacking force of the eremy consisted of about 12,000 men. Their position en the ground was such that not more than one of our regiments could operate at the same time, while the rebels could bring nearly their whole force to bear against us The first regiment to receive the rebels was the 18th, which fought with desperate courage until their ammunition was exhausted, when they we e forced to retire with a considerable loss of officers and men. They were replaced by the 8th, which also fell back in turn. Meanwhile, other reg. iments were lending such feeble aid as their positions would admit. Gen. Lew. Wallace was then ordered to reinforce McClernand, and sent two brigades of his division from the centre. The 31st Illinois, Col. Logan, fought like veterans and struggled in defending the Schwartz Battery under the most galling fire, until all the horses of the battery, with all the officers in charge of the guns, were killed. The lieutenant-colonel, the acting major, 7 captains, and a number of lieutenants of the 31st were also killed, and the colonel was wounded. Being nearly surrounded, Capt. McCook, who had been left in command, drew what remained of the regiment of the field—not, however, until their last round had been fired, and they had commenced to drive the rebels before them. The 2d Brigade now came up and took its place, received the fire, and fought desperately, losing a great number in killed and wounded, when, with the as-istance of a portion of Wallace's Division, the 49th and 59th Onio, with Taylor's Battery, which was stationed on the hill near by, as the rebels came again to the charge, they opened fire on them and drove a portion back into their entrenchments, while a large portion still occupied the ground they had gained. The object of the rebels was evidently to cut their way through our troops.

In the afternoon Gen. Grant saw that something should be done to restore the spirits of our disheartened troops, so he ordered Gen. Smith to make an assault on the west wing of the enemy's works. Gen. Smith r de along the line and ordered his men to prepare for the charge, which caused shouts of joy throughout the whole line. Immediately Col. Lammon's Brigade, consisting of the 2d and 7th Iowa, 11th and 25th Indiana Regiments, charged up to the enemy's redoubt, driving the rebels before them at the point of the bayonet like frightened sheep, and gaining possession of the outer works. Gen. Smith behaved like one inspired for nothing less than con-tinual victories. He could be seen riding along the lines, his hat swinging on the top of his sword, encouraging the men, regardless of the deadly mis-siles flying around him.

The Colonel of the 2d Iowa Regiment was the first to mount the enemy's works, with his men close behind him. The storming was complete, as the troops had gained a position inside of the works. Here they laid on their arms all night, prepared to follow up the success in the morning.

After Gen. Smith had gained his position, Gen. Grant sent word of the success of the right wing, and ordered Gens. McClernand and Wallice to renew the attack, when the 1st and 21 Brigades, which had een in the bloody affray in the morning, with Me-Clernand's Division, with two Brigades of Wallace's Divison, made a fresh assault on the enemy, and regained all the ground previously lost, and pressed forward clo e to the left of the rebel fortifications. They then laid on their arms, prepared to act in concert with Gen. Smith on Sunday morning.

During the night contraction lines were made for an early assault with the bayonet. At daylight the advance was made, but when the full light of day appeared, while flags were seen hung in many places on the enemy's works. The Federal officers approached to a convenient spot, and were informed that the rebels had stacked arms, and surrendered on Sunday morning.

Gen. Buckner, commanding the rebels, sent a dispatch to Gen. Grant, requesting an armistice until 12 o'clock, and the appointment of Commissioners to agree on terms of capitulation. Gen. Grant replied : "No terms except an unconditional and immediate surrender can be accepted. I propose to more im-mediately on your works." Gen. Buckner replied: "The distribution of forces under my command, incident to the unexpected change of commanders, and the overwhelming force under your command, compel me, not withstanding the brilliant success of the Confelerate arms of yesterday, to accept the ungenerous and unchiv drous terms you propose." Our whole force were soon in the enemy's works, and the rebel of the rebel prisoners would gla officers gave up their swords. The bulk of the rebels knew of the surrender long before our men were apprised of it. Generals Pillow and Floyd planned and executed their escape during the night, taking with them Floyd's Brigade, occupying what few small steamers the rebels had. The prisoners are very loud in denouncing the run-aways. Many of them acknowledge the hopelessness of their cause, and intimate their willingness to take the cath of allegiance.

The composition of the rebel regiments was as follows: Tennessee, 11; Mississippi, 8; Texas, 1; Kentucky, 2; Arkansas, 1; Virginia, 4; with a battalion of cavalry to each of the Tennessee, Alabama ger says we are only a short distance behind Price's and Mississippi divisions. A bright light was seen in the direction of Clarke ville for several hours on Sunday night. It is supposed that the rebels had fired the town, or their steamers, to prevent them falling into our hands. It is supposed that the greatest portion of the prisoners will be sent to Chicago for safe keeping. The damage done to the rebel works at Fort Donel-son by the gunbours, is not so great as at first reportei, only one gun being dismounted in a battery of eight 32-pounders, and a 12-inch shell gun. Many o the rebels who escaped are supposed to have gone to Nashville or Clarksville. It is believed that at the latter place the Confederates will attempt to make another stand. The rebel officers admit that if Nashville is taken the rebellion is gone up. Gen. Halleck has determined to have all the wounded, on both sides, taken to St. Louis. The G n. Johnson taken is Bushrod Johnson of the Tennessee Brigade. The correspondent of the St. Louis Reapublican's account of the Fort Donelson fight says: "During Friday night the enemy could be heard busily at what it was impossible to tell, as thickets and woods encompassed the Union troops on every side, render-ing a view in any direction almost impossible. daybreak on Saturday a sortie was made by the garrison from the left position of the works on the extreme right of the Union army, which was the weakest. At the same time they opened a fire with cannon from their redoubts, and also from guns placed in position the night previous. The camp of the 29th and 81st Illinois was most exposed. The whole Brigado immediately formed in line of battle, and rom the firing of the first gun until 9 o'clock, the battle raged unremittingly, with fearful loss on both sides. Again and again our troops drove them back, but they were often reinforced; while our troops, owing to the extended lines of the enemy, and also their own position, had to fight unassisted. More gallant fighting never took place. They stood until, in some regiments, every officer was killed or wounded, and at last, they reluctantly fell back, regiment by regiment, leaving Schwartz's Battery with three of McAllister's guns in the hands of the enemy. After retiring a few hundred yards, they made a stand, until reinforcements arrived, and at once drove the enemy back to their entrenchments. The rebel forces in attack were 12,000, supported by guns carefully placed.

The scene within the captured Fort after the surrender showed how terribly the rebel garrison suffered. Everywhere were lying fragments of shell and round shot, half buried in the earth, tents torn to dead bodies lay thickly about, giving abundant
